

Headwinds

Headwinds is corporate jargon used to describe challenges or constraints that slow down business growth

Evangelist

Businesses refer to those customers as evangelists who are strong advocates of the brand and promote it often

Bring to the Table

This is common corporate jargon, so much so that people have even started using it in their daily lives. Bring to the table is used to refer to the skills, expertise, ideas, or experience that you can offer to a project, task, or organization.

Balls in the Air

Corporate professionals use the phrase 'balls in the air' when several activities or tasks are going on simultaneously. It has the same meaning as the phrase 'too much on the plate'.

Herding Cats

This is a negative phrase mainly used by managers to describe that their team members are disagreeable or difficult to deal with.